This is a space that fosters collaboration between culture and wisdom, a place of exchange to further enrich your time spent at the University of Tokyo. This is an international dormitory built on a site filled with greenery left over from when it was a branch hospital of the University of Tokyo Hospital. International students, international researchers and Japanese students from a variety of specialized fields will live in this accommodation. The communal life with diverse people is sure to cultivate your communication skills and widen your international horizons. By interacting with individuals from different fields other than your specialization, you will be able to acquire the ability to set an ambitious vision for the present and the future.

Shared block accommodating 20 people
Both individual and communal space are segmented throughout the shared block, which accommodates about 20 people. This is a place where residents can spend their daily lives eating, learning, bathing and socializing. At the same time, this place supports a variety of communication through everyday life. It is a precious space that cannot be obtained by living alone.

Dwelling composition to meet diverse needs
The residence in this facility consists of two types: “shared type dwelling unit” consisting of a private room and shared living space and “independent type private room” equipped completely with housing facilities such as shower and toilet. In addition, several types of dwelling units with different floor space and fees are prepared to meet the affiliation of the residents, family composition, and other various lifestyles.

Fully equipped common area
The facility’s fully equipped common area makes international exchange by about 1000 people possible. This facility has a lounge equipped with a kitchen and a “learning common” (multipurpose hall) that can accommodate a large number of people. In addition, it has a sports room and a soundproofed room that also provides opportunities of exchanges through sports and music.
