Talk to the Authors: The Puzzle of Vaccine Hesitancy

Andrew GORDON
Professor of History, Harvard University/
Tokyo College Professor

Michael R. REICH
Taro Takemi Research Professor of International Health Policy, Harvard University

Recent studies and media accounts reporting Japan to be unusually vaccine hesitant require critical scrutiny. Our historical review shows that many vaccines have been accepted and that today recommended routine vaccines are universally accepted. That said, social mobilization of vaccine-injured victims has generated public and official hesitancy toward new vaccines and represents a significant challenge for Japan’s public policy.

GOTO Aya
Professor of Health Information and Epidemiology, Fukushima Medical University

UDAGAWA Yoshie
Project Researcher, Tokyo College

Michael FACIUS
Associate Professor, Tokyo College

2021. 5.27 9:00-10:30am

JST
U.S. (EDT)

5.26 8:00-9:30 pm

Pre-registration required

Register now

Zoom Webinar

English with simultaneous Japanese translation

tokyo.college.event@tc.u-tokyo.ac.jp